5 years ago Microsoft said they would behave. We are back at it again. When the agreement runs out in 5 years, they can go back to their old ways, then we spend more government money to investigate them again. Next time they will do a better job of getting rid of incriminating evidence. I can not go anywhere in my computer without being reminded that MSN or Explorer is waiting to service my needs. I think the company still should be broken into two companies.
